South Asia Missionary Archives Guide

A preliminary guide to archival collections relating to American Protestant missionary activity in South Asia (including Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Burma/Myanmar, Ceylon/Sri Lanka, India, Nepal, and Pakistan) - with a focus on the holdings of undergraduate liberal arts colleges in the United States.

Female students at Ewing Christian College, Allahabad. From the Rice Collection. (courtesy Special Collections, The College of Wooster Libraries.)

Over the years, scholars have benefited greatly from Archie R. Crouch's project to identify and describe archival materials related to Christian missionary activity in China, which resulted in the monumental Christianity in China: a scholars' guide to resources in the libraries and archives of the United States and is now carried forward by the Ricci Roundtable. This website is a first step toward providing comprehensive information about archival collections documenting missionary activity in South Asia. Compiled by Margo Warner Curl of the College of Wooster, these first sets of descriptions are primarily of holdings of undergraduate college archives, and in some cases, seminary or denominational archives housed at the colleges.

Consortium

The Documentation of Christianity in Asia Consortium (DCIA) is a collaborative project, the purpose of which is to improve the documentation of Christianity in Asia through the identification and description of both primary and secondary source documents.

The DCIA Guide (currently under development) is envisioned to be a web based tool that will identify where primary sources and other material related to Christianity in Asia are located. Additionally, other resources may be located through consortial members' catalogs and special collections, including the Special Collections of the Yale University Divinity Library, The Centre for the Study of Christianity in Asia \(CSCA\), and the online library catalogs of the participating member institutions.

The website for the project is hosted by Yale University Library.

Search tips

Multiple words: When you enter more than one word, for example, Walter Dill Scott, descriptions match if they contain all of your words.

Double a phrase: To find a phrase, enter your words within double quotes. For example, "Walter Dill Scott".

Words near each other: To find matches on your search terms near one another, put your words in quotes and follow with a tilde and a number indicating how far apart matching words can be. This technique is known as a proximity search. For example, to find the words "john" and "booth" within a range of four words, use "john"~4 "booth".

Group portrait of South Sea and Papuan teachers and families, Kalaigolo, Papua New Guinea, ca. 1908-1910

The Internet Mission Photography Archive offers historical images from Protestant and Catholic missionary collections in Britain, Norway, Germany, and the United States. The photographs, which range in time from the middle of the nineteenth to the middle of the twentieth century, offer a visual record of missionary activities and experiences in Africa, China, Madagascar, India, Papua-New Guinea, and the Caribbean. The photographs reveal the physical influence of missions, visible in mission compounds, churches, and school buildings, as well as the cultural impact of mission teaching, religious practices, and Western technology and fashions. Indigenous peoples' responses to missions and the emergence of indigenous churches are represented, as are views of landscapes, cities, and towns before and in the early stages of modern development.

Description

"Opening of New Church at Kouti." This new church built entirely by local subscription was being opened by the visiting English missionary. Local Methodists from a wide area had come along for the celebration. Next to the chapel is a large cotton tree. From a set of lantern slides entitled "Dahomey, the stronghold of the fetich" compiled by Frank Deaville Walker (1878-1945), editor of the Methodist Missionary Society magazines Foreign Field and its successor, Kingdom Overseas. Many of the photographs Walker used were his own, taken on visits to the MMS mission fields between 1920 and 1937. His trip to West Africa when the photographs in this set were taken took place ca. 1925-1926.

INTERNATIONAL BULLETIN OF MISSIONARY RESEARCH WITH YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL LIBRARY

This database incorporates compilations of missions-related dissertations published in the July 1983, July 1993, and July 2003 issues of the International Bulletin of Missionary Research, and has been expanded in its scope. First, it includes English-language doctoral dissertations without regard to country of origin. Secondly, rather than focusing narrowly on missions, it also includes dissertations dealing with Christianity outside the West. Excluded are dissertations about Christianity in Europe, Australasia, and North America, with the exception of aboriginal missions in those areas. Thirdly, it expands the chronological scope to include dissertations presented since 1900. Fourth, the earlier compilations were limited to “research” doctorates, understood to include the Th.D. and the Ph.D.; the present compilation includes all doctoral level dissertations and theses that we could identify, including the D.Min. and D.Miss. Finally, we consulted many more sources to identify theses and dissertations than did the predecessor compilations, including websites and published bibliographies (a bibliography of sources consulted will be included with the database). As a result, the number of titles identified increased from 2,371 in its three predecessors to 5,911. The creation of this database was undertaken in collaboration with the International Bulletin of Missionary Research, and made possible by the support of the Overseas Ministries Study Center, New Haven, Conn.
